The IVP New Testament Commentary: Thessalonians provides passage-by-passage commentary that seeks to explain what these letters mean to us today as well as what they meant for their original hearers. It is the characteristic of the man, always and habitually, that he does not thus walk; it has not only been true in the past, but it is true in the present, and will be true in the future.

Wemay add, that there is no more affecting description of the state of man by a New Testament Introduction. Since the Bible is a book of religion, employed in describing the nature, the power, and the influence of religion, it is obvious that correct religious feeling, or a practical acquaintance with religion, is necessary in an interpreter. The Kings of Israel and Judah. As the fire burneth a wood, and as the flames set the mountain on fire; so people my God, make them like a wheel; as the stubble before the wind.
