Contests between well-known bards, vying to out-sing each other, are within living memory in the villages; audiences are still stirred by stories of battle, moved by songs of love, and entertained by the exploits of fast-talking tricksters. Performers There is often a distinction in Kurdish between those performers who perform with musical accompaniment and those who use only their voice. Leonard N.

Thus, the use of diacritics for consonants has been kept to a minimum in the text. Any item that is faulty or damaged upon receipt must be reported within 24 hrs. Much of the Mukri poem consists of soliloquies, or of listings, such as when the Khan looks out and sees first one rider, then another, from different places; each is described in succession. The point here is that even when very little performance data is available, the same narrative tradition can be seen to have a range of different treatments in different areas.

These models, developed for the field of Arabic literature, can be applied to the Kurdish diaspora continues to grow, and is already a substantial global community.
