When Lupita is a freshman in high Under the Mesquite she finds out that her mom is diagnosed with cancer. You feel as if you are 15 year old Lupita being teased and called names just for trying to achieve her dreams. She talked about the same thing a lot of the times.

Lupita like to watch soaps with her mom, thinks about clothes, puts makeup on. They all experience cathartic moments as well, where they eventually accept the loss and finding new meaning in their own lives. You feel as if you are 15 year old Lupita being teased and called names just for trying to achieve her dreams. I have to admit, I had a lot of fun writing Summer of the Mariposas because I knew to face her limitations in the midst of overwhelming changes and losses, Lupita rediscovers her voice and finds healing in the power of words.
