Although anaesthetic drugs are much less cardiovascularly depressant depressant on blood pressure and rough on the kidneys and liver these days, there is still the possibility that an individual cat or kitten may develop acute renal failure immediately after or some days after any anaesthetic procedure, even such a quick, routine procedure as feline spaying. Further radiographicdye studies can then be used to determine where the ureteral rupture is located. Image 2: When the cat was placed onto its back, the lump remained. Unless your veterinarians says otherwise, it is normally fine to feed your cat. Just Seashell Photos! Famous Felines. Write your review.
